

Windows of Wonder - Pat

22nd May 2011

I did empathise with your moment of revelation at Charing Cross tube - perceiving the people around as 'shimmer[ing] with divinity' - especially because your description, in Unmasking God, reminded me of a moment on a number 16 bus from Cricklewood, many years ago, when I vividly became, very momentarily, aware of what could be termed the 'godness' glimmering in the people around, however little they were aware of it. Often harked back to, and hopefully influencing my attitudes, but never recaptured in the same way...
